In the olden days in England, the laws were very cruel. A man could be hanged for a very small offence. The Sheriffs, who were the keepers of law, were ignorant men and would hang a man on little or no evidence. Often, when a man feared some punishment from the sheriff, he would run away to the forest. There they would join the company of other men who had come there like him. Such men were called outlaws. They made their living by hunting and by robbing travellers on the highways.

Robin Hood was the leader of a company of outlaws, who lived in the Sherwood forest. His name was a terror to the rich, but he was loved by the poor whom he saved from cruel landlords and often helped with money.

The Sheriff of the nearby town was his bitter enemy. After many vain attempts to catch Robin Hood, the Sheriff one day declared that he would give half of his wealth to anyone who could help him to catch Robin Hood.
