AUS EINEM APRIL" BY RILKE

Wieder duftet der Wald.

Es heben die schwebenden Lerchen mit sich den Himmel empor, der unseren Schultern schwer war; zwar sah man noch durch die Äste den Tag, wie er leer war, aber nach langen, regnenden Nachmittagen kommen die goldübersonnten neueren Stunden,

vor denen flüchtend an fernen Häuserfronten alle die wunden Fenster furchtsam mit Flügeln schlagen.

Dann wird es still. Sogar der Regen geht leiser über der Steine ruhig dunkelnden Glanz.

Alle Geräusche ducken sich ganz in die glänzenden Knospen der Reiser

THE FOREST SMELLS AGAIN.

It raises the floating larks which were so heavy on our shoulders, upwards into the sky;

indeed, one saw through the branches the day, how it was empty, but after long, rainy afternoons

come the gold, sunny

newer hours,

before which the far house fronts flee all the sore windows, fearful with wings' attack.

Then it is still. Even the rain goes softer over the stone's peaceful, darkening shine.

All sounds hide away

in the shiny buds of the bushes.
